“ I am Kelly's son and i am 14 my mom has been gone for about 7 or 8 years since her passing. I don't have much to say about my mom as i was only 6 when she passed but what i do remember is she is me and my sisters momma and she is going to be grandma anytime soon as my sister is and has been pregnant for about 7 months, Our mom would be so proud of you sis. Life would be better with you here mom i love you.

“ I'm Kelly's niece, Kassidy, and I just want to say that I love everything everyone has said about my aunt Kelly. She was an amazing person. But I bet she's an even more amazing angel. There is so much I want to talk to her about. So many memories that I won't ever get a chance to talk about with her. It's insane how much you can miss someone. Just one thought and it takes you back to every single memory you've ever shared with that person. I don't know about every one else but I tend to talk to aunt Kelly without even meaning to. She is the first person who pops in my head when I am going through something or I have a problem. When I am going through a tough time, I pray to that girl. I don't know if she's able to here me or not but I have hope. After talking to her I always feel so much better. Like every problem in the world is fixed for just five seconds. I just can't believe that she's gone. Almost three years...it feels like ages ago but the pain still feels as though it happened just yesterday. I know Nana can relate to that feeling. Losing a daughter has got to hurt. I know it hurts you Nana and I'm so glad that you can keep living your life even though a huge chunk is missing. And Brooke...oh Brooke...you're momma would be so proud of you. She would forgive you for all the bad things that you said to her throughout the years and for all the arguments you guys have had. I know she would give anything to spend five more minutes with you. And you would do the same. I mean who wouldn't?? She was always full of joy and laughter and God. It was amazing what spending a day with that crazy girl could do to you. Spending a day with her could make you look at everything differently. In that on day she could have you seeing everything in a different perspective than the day before. She was such a lovely person to be around. I remember the first time I ever had hot tea was with her. We were at Pomme de Terre Lake and it was like 1:30am. We couldn't sleep so we went into the kitchen and she made some hot tea for the both of us. We sat there and talked for as long as i can remember. We talked about anything and everything. One of the things I loved about her was that she always believed in the impossible. She was one of the strongest and most imaginative woman I've ever met. She loved every single one of you. I know she did. She was just that kind of person. I love you so much aunt Kelly. Rest In Peace.

“ this is what i wrote for her funeral----- i will always and forever love you. you were always a favorite. i told you everything.... they was something you wanted to tell me but didn't get the time to. i should have listened when i had the chance. bc i was too sleepy to listen now i'll never know. i'm going to try my best for you in hopes of when i get to heaven you will be proud of me because i know you want me to live my life to the fullest. a couple days before you left us you told me you couldn't wait to see what i would become. u said you knew i would be great. i will be great because you wanted me to be. i was blessed to be one of the people you spent your last days with... we had fun sitting around papas house. making food for everyone. you taught me many things. like how to seek god in every aspect of my life. i am trying... its really hard to do when something so tragic like this has happened. how am i suppose to see the silver lining. the last time i saw you was sunday night around 10:00 and every second up to that time you did everything you could for me. you lost sleep trying to keep me safe, brought a tv for me to watch, let me sleep in you bed, painted my toes blue. did you know blue is now my favorite color because of you. you moved and will move many people. i am blessed to have known you and been related to you. at your funeral i will not wear black... because i know you would want me too. i don't think i could bare to see you like that. we talked about a lot of things together the last few days and i will try to fix all of them... i'll be your silver lining. i'm going to be closer to my family. try to see the silver lining. i know this will never be okay but our family will be okay in time and with a lot of blessings to come .i'm trying to stay strong for you... and i'm going to stick by uncle josh because i know you would want me to. i love you. and i know you love me. but i feel like there was something i could have done or something i could have said to make you last longer or ease your inner pain. the realization of these last couple of days have been excruciating. bc every time i have the chance to think about you i do. you made everything brighter. how am i going to be okay knowing your not here. and before i know you lived far away i knew you somewhere on this earth. now you're nowhere to be found. but i have no doubt in my mind that you are in heaven.i love you for eternity forever and always you were a great person and an amazing aunt.nothing could ever change my mind. because i knew you from the inside out. you were a blessing. watch over me as i look up to you. and when i'm old enough to get a tattoo i'll get the one you wanted. bless the secret we kept.
